LAS VEGAS, Nev., April 1, 2009 – Dmailer, a leading software provider specializing in portable backup and synchronization solutions for mobile devices, is demonstrating at CTIA Wireless a software application for the Google Android phone, which allows users to synchronize information from Microsoft Exchange Server to their mobile phone. Dmailer Mobile for Android application solves a major pain point for consumers, who will be able to automatically and seamlessly “over the air” synchronize critical email, contact and calendar information directly from the Microsoft Exchange Server.

“Dmailer Mobile for Android provides a significant opportunity for T-Mobile, Orange, AT&T and other leading worldwide carriers offering the Google Android mobile platform to reach business users who rely on mobile access to their e-mail via Microsoft Exchange,” said Lucas Leonardi, CEO of Dmailer. “As open-source mobile devices become more widely adopted, comprehensive and scalable synchronization applications like Dmailer Mobile for Android will become increasingly important for both operators and end users.”

According to Strategy Analytics, more than 400,000 Android mobile phones have been sold in the United States alone. This number is predicted to rise as HTC recently announced plans to release three new Android phones in 2009.

Dmailer for Android Capabilities and Features

Currently, Dmailer for Android synchronizes contacts with Outlook and Exchange and can include Dmailer’s cross-platform (Windows, Mac & Linux) core engine and Outlook synchronization expertise to easily include email, calendar and even office documents. Dmailer Sync, the company’s flagship product, has been synchronizing Outlook email, contact, calendar, files and all other PC data onto portable storage devices for more than five years with partners such as SanDisk, Western Digital, Lexar and Verbatim, in 130 countries and 19 languages.

Android users can synchronize “Over the Air” or connect their Android mobile phone to the PC and the Dmailer management tools will automatically synch the contacts to their mobile phone. Additional synchronization support for email, calendars, notes and tasks will be delivered by Dmailer later this year on an operator specific basis. Additionally, the software is completely transparent to the end-user, allowing data from Microsoft Exchange to be transferred to the default container of the mobile device once the Exchange account information has been set up.
